

COLLABORATIVE TEAMING FOR K-12 TEACHERS

I Can't Do This Alone: How to Maximize the Collaborative Structures and Mindsets in Your School To Support All Students

Supporting a student-centered learning environment is difficult to undertake by yourself. This two full-day, in-person workshop, explores the key school structures and collaborative mindsets necessary to balance the "skill and will" components of change.

Whether you attend as an individual or with a team, you will leave with actionable next steps to enhance the collaborative practices on your team and in your building.

Session I - Thursday, October 3

Too often decisions are made in a vacuum, resulting in confusion and frustration by those charged with carrying out the intended change. In this session, we will focus on the key considerations in developing collaborative structures school-wide that allow everyone to be focused on and committed to a common effort.

Session II - Thursday, November 7

Resistance is often due to not fully understanding the direction a school is headed or the intentions of those we work with. In this session, we will dig into the unique attributes each member of a team brings to the table, and consider how to better lean into these strengths to operate as a highly functioning team.
