I Can't Do This Alone: How to Maximize the Collaborative Structures and Mindsets in Your School To Support All Students

Supporting a student-centered learning environment is difficult to undertake by yourself. This four-session, virtual workshop, explores the key school structures and collaborative mindsets necessary to balance the "skill and will" components of change.

Whether you attend as an individual or with a team, you will leave with actionable next steps to enhance the collaborative practices on your team and in your building.

Share one substitute for two teachers by sending one group in the morning and another group in the afternoon.

Session Content

Too often decisions are made in a vacuum, resulting in confusion and frustration by those charged with carrying out the intended change. We will focus on the key considerations in developing collaborative structures school-wide that allow everyone to be focused on and committed to a common effort.

Resistance is often due to not fully understanding the direction a school is heading or the intentions of those we work with. We will dig into the unique attributes each member of a team brings to the table, and consider how to better lean into these strengths to operate as a highly functioning team.
